Puerto Ricans Revolt

Mass Jailbreak Adds To Unrest

SAN JUAN, Oct. 30—A Nationalist revolt against the Puerto Rican government of Governor Luis Munoz Marin broke out today.

Initial reports said that eight towns are affected by the uprising.

The movement followed a mass jailbreak by 60 desperados who shot their way out of a trap and are still at large, striking terror into Puerto Rican countryside.

It was not established immediately whether the jailbreak was connected with the uprising.

Nationalists who favored severance of relations with the United States, stormed the governor's palace.

The attack on the official residence of the governor was followed by gun firing in the streets.

At least five persons were killed and a number wounded in various parts of the island.

The Nationalists are led by a Harvard graduate named Pedro Albizu Campos, who with seven colleagues spent six years in Atlanta Penitentiary on charges of attempting to depose the government by force.

His followers refuse to serve in the U. S. Army. They maintained that it is "an army of occupation from a foreign country."

The government's palace in San Juan, known as La Fortaleza, was built in 1507 and was the former residence of Spanish governors. Nearby is El Morro, where U. S. Army barracks are located, and the Casa Rosada headquarters of the U. S. military mission.

Before Puerto Rican authorities announced the outbreak, police searched the house of a Nationalist leader named Muniz in Ponce. They seized a large arsenal of guns, rifles and chemicals used in the making of "Molotov cocktails."

While Puerto Ricans are automatically citizens of the United States, the country now is virtually self-governed.

UNTIL 1947, Puerto Rico was under direct supervision of the United States Congress and the President of the U. S. was responsible for appointment of the governor.

In that year, President Truman signed an amendment to the Organic Act of Puerto Rico, which was drafted in 1917, providing for the election of the governor by the voters of the island.

Puerto Rico is represented in the United States by a resident commissioner who has a voice in the House of Representatives in Washington, but no vote.

Another 47 of the 107 criminals who escaped from Rio Piedras prison Saturday are back in custody.

National Guardsmen in San Juan were alerted and the civilian population was urged to remain indoors until the escaped convicts, some of them murderers serving life terms, can be run down.

The police trapped the desperados in a hill along the road between Caguas and Rio Piedras about 10 miles south of San Juan.

But the criminals, many of them veterans, staged a military-style withdrawal under the cover of darkness and the fire of sharp-shooting rear guard.

The prison break, carried out with brutal precision, started with a simulated riot among the prisoners which drew the guards from their posts.

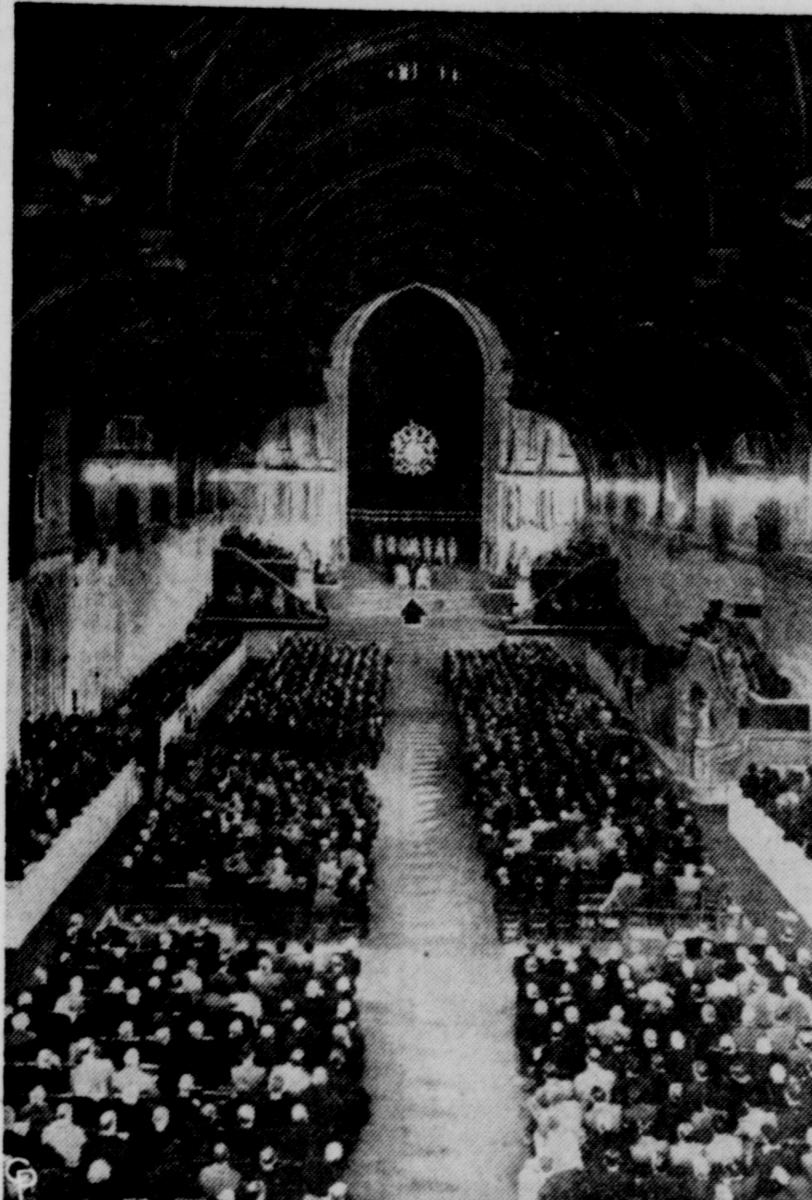

The convicts then fell upon the guards, killing two and wounding five.

The escapees raided the prison arsenal and armed themselves heavily before breaking beyond the walls to freedom.

Silent Screen Star Is Dead

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30—The name of Maurice Costello was missing today from the dwindling list of living movie pioneers.

Costello, the original "great lover" of the silent screen, one of the first men to be starred in pictures and the father of the former stars, Dolores and Helen Costello, died yesterday. He was 74.

NATION EYES OUTCOME

Big Steel's Wage Hike Parley Is Continuing

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30—U. S. Steel and the CIO-United Steelworkers resume bargaining talks today on the union's 1950 wage demands.

The talks, which got underway here Friday, are still in the general discussion stage, with the company yet to make an offer in reply to the union's request for a "healthy and substantial" pay hike.

The conferences here are being watched with intense interest by all employers and unions in the nation since any Big Steel wage increase probably will be duplicated elsewhere.

Discussions Friday revolved around what to talk about. Although only wage adjustments may be discussed at this time, under terms of the two-year contract, the union has submitted five additional goals.

These include severance pay, geographical wage differences, improved overtime, shift premiums, and inequities in the iron ore and non-ferrous mining divisions.

U. S. STEEL HAS offered to listen to anything the union has to say on these matters, but has stipulated this in no way commits the corporation to bargain on anything but wages.

Presumably "money talk" will get down to serious discussion after the negotiating teams are whittled down to "hotel-room" size.

USW President Philip Murray and John Stephens, U. S. Steel vice-president and chief bargainer, currently are flanked by teams of about 35 men each.

The Steelworkers have held preliminary talks with some 35 other steel firms besides Big Steel.

Parents, look to your children. Don't let them get you in trouble."

The warning came from Pickaway County Sheriff Charles Radcliff, whose ire was caught flame from a report of another burned corn fodder shock in Walnut Township over the weekend.

"Halloween pranksters obviously were to blame," said the sheriff. "They burn these things for a joke, a Halloween stunt. But it isn't funny."

"Farmers work hard plowing, planting and cultivating their lands. He builds his corn fodder shocks, representing not only his time and labor, but money."

"And then a bunch of kids come along and burn it—just for a laugh."

"Well, the farmers aren't laughing, and neither am I. If I catch anyone burning corn fodder shock or anything else for a Halloween joke, I'm going to ask the court to go the limit, throw the book at him."

"If juveniles are involved, that means the parents will catch the brunt of the punishment."

The sheriff added that parents could do a great deal to cut down on property destruction during Halloween simply by talking to their children, explaining the full implications of Halloween pranks involving destruction.

The sheriff reported the latest act by pranksters occurred Sunday night, when Halloweeners blockaded Route 316 near South Bloomfield with farm gates.

"Someone could have been hurt by that act," Radcliff said. "Not only that, but some farmer might have lost his livestock because his gates were stolen."

Tito Praises U.S., Slaps At Soviet Circle

BELGRADE, Oct. 30—Marshal Tito aligned his country today on the side of those resisting aggression and assured the Yugoslav people that American food shipments will prevent mass starvation.

Speaking at Zagreb Sunday, at the opening congress of the Anti-Fascist Women's Organization, the Yugoslav leader said:

"Those who are for peace can be sure they always will have us at their side. Those collaborating for aggression will always have us against them."

He praised the generosity of the United States in giving food to the Yugoslav people who are faced with the worst drought in 50 years but denied that any "strings" are attached to the aid.

He took an oblique slap at Russia and her satellites when he declared:

"All constructive forces of the world favor the aid given our country and we asked aid from the side we knew was willing to give it and not from the side we knew would not."

CAMPAIGN ROLLING INTO FINAL DAYS

Taft And Lausche Tagged At 6 To 5 To Be Winners In Next Week's Poll

COLUMBUS, Oct. 30—Ohio swung into its last full week of its election campaign today with Sen. Robert A. Taft, a Republican, and Gov. Frank J. Lausche, a Democrat, holding a slight leading edge.

Generally, the two were held at a 6-to-5 advantage over State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson and State Treasurer Don H. Ebright respectively.

It appears now—subject to later correction—that Ohioans will keep the senator and governor they have rather than promote two other office-holders to the highest state jobs.

Ferguson meanwhile wired Sen. Guy Gillette, president of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, asking that the committee come into Ohio before the Nov. 7 balloting and investigate campaign expenditures—meaning, of course, Taft's.

A TAFT AIDE in Cincinnati welcomed the thought of the probe although referring to it as "a last minute effort to becloud the issues of this campaign."

The aide, Campaign Manager Willis D. Gradison, declared: "However, such an investigation should first start with the millions of dollars raised by the CIO-PAC, the AFL, and other unions all over the country to be used in Ohio to defeat Senator Taft. These facts have been known and widely publicized for more than a year."

Gradison recalled the statement of AFL President William Green on Aug. 23, 1949: "Cost what it may, we're going to bring about the defeat of this most reprehensible, notorious Senator Taft—we'll defeat him with money."

Cleveland, which casts about one-fifth of the total vote, is going to receive a great deal of attention in this final week. Ferguson moved in yesterday and although leaving for a short swing through the coal fields of Eastern Ohio today, the state auditor will be back to spend the remainder of the week in the state's biggest city.

In a series of Sunday talks, Ferguson continued his attack on Taft's voting record and pledged he would work for "all the people of Ohio."

EBRIGHT ALSO concentrated on Northern Ohio, starting his week off with a family reunion on television.

The reception met his wife, son and daughter in Toledo, with Mrs. Ebright relating her experiences in canvassing 70 of the 88 counties for her husband.

Ebright said he liked to think of government as "a family affair," in which all would join for their mutual benefit. The son and daughter told of their activities among the younger folk.

Taft, also in Cleveland, declared that he favors educational, persuasive fair employment practices legislation over a compulsory FEPC program.

In answer to a question which followed a speech, Taft stated: "You will recall that mine was the first FEPC bill introduced in the Senate, and it is far more likely that the Republicans can pass this type of legislation than the Democrats with their southern affiliations."

"I believe the proper way to approach this problem is to advance steadily the position of the colored people until it is on an equal with that of the whites."

"PROPER" education, steady progress and persuasion will, although slow at the start, proceed far faster in the end than a compulsory program which drags people into court and produces a million lawsuits.

"There are a thousand reasons why a man can be turned down for a job. When litigation results from legislation, as it would from a strong FEPC, much greater race feeling is created."

Taft added that "if I am mistaken, the other methods can be tried."

The heaviest fighting erupted in Northwest Korea as an estimated 10,000 Reds, reportedly including many Chinese Communists, masquerading in North Korean uniforms, recaptured Onjiong and assaulted Usan.

The U. S. First Cavalry Division's tank-led Eighth Regiment, bringing mobile guns, was hurrying north to the Onjiong-Usan area to succor the hard-pressed Rok (Republic of Korea) Sixth and Eighth Divisions.

From Northeast Korea, meanwhile, a dispatch by International News Photos Cameraman Irwin Tress quoted a U. S. 10th Corps headquarters spokesman as saying 20 prisoners identified as Chinese Communists were reported taken Monday night.

The 10th Corps officer told of reports that a full Chinese army regiment is fighting in Northeast Korea against UN forces.

The spokesman said corps headquarters is awaiting further reports on this unit as well as on other Chinese Red groups reported unconfirmed to be in action in the Northeast Korean area.

The prisoners taken by the Rok Third Division were reportedly told to interrogators they were part of a Chinese division which has thrust spearheads to within only 25 miles northwest of Hamhung. The division, the prisoners were quoted as adding, has orders to retake Hamhung, a major eastern port, by Wednesday.

At the opposite end of the flaming front, the British Commonwealth's 27th Brigade completed the capture of Chongju after savage street fighting against stubbornly resisting Reds who then retreated to the north.

Thereupon, the British Commonwealth troops were supplanted by U. S. 24th Division units which proceeded to carry on the advance beyond Chongju up the western seaboard toward the

INFLATION SWINGING UP

Higher Tax, More Control Predicted By Experts

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—Government economists took today for a new wave of higher taxes and stricter controls to halt the upward swing of inflation.

The economists are said to indicate at their trial to call witnesses in their behalf, no right to appeal the death sentences, no chance to communicate with relatives, no privilege of receiving counsel or other visitors and no way of receiving last religious rites.

Captain Kim explained that these customary rights granted to suspects and doomed men and women were denied the victims because of "pressures of war."

They said: "Much will depend on governmental actions to reduce the impact of increasing incomes by higher taxes, credit restrictions, allocation of scarce materials and control of inventories."

Spokesmen of some goods available to civilians, especially durable goods, are expected to dwindle during 1951 and early 1952 because of military demands.

"If the international situation permits" military spending to level off in 1952, the government economists said, next year's shortages of civilian goods will be overcome during that year.

The government meanwhile forecasts a record high in the gross national product for 1950 and even greater production next year.

The gross national product, yardstick of the total value of the nation's output at prevailing market prices, this year was estimated at about $277 billion. It was $256 billion in 1949 and $259 billion in 1948.

Manchurian border, 50 miles away.

INLAND FROM Chongju, the 24th Division's Fifth Regiment ran into stiffened Communist opposition as the Americans thrust within two miles of Kusong, 35 miles below the Yalu international boundary.

From American First Corps headquarters, INS War Correspondent John Rich reported in an early Tuesday front dispatch that the battle-seasoned U. S. 24th was slowed in its advance on Kusong by Red artillery, mortars and landmines.

On the 24th east flank, a regiment of the Rok First Division was attacked by a unit of 400 enemy troops. The onslaught was repulsed by artillery and small arms fire.

Rich related that spreading underbrush fires, touched off by igniting gunpowder, broke out in the 24th Division's sector between Chongju and Tae-chon, filling the area with a thick pall of smoke.

The Rok Sixth Division was pushed out of Ojong and thrown into broken retreat Sunday after losing 30 percent of its men and much of its equipment in three days of furious combat.

It was the first important setback suffered by United Nations forces since the breakout from Southeast Korea's Pusan beachhead six weeks ago to launch the offensive into North Korea.

On the Rok Sixth Division's right flank, the North Korean Reds, also reportedly reinforced by Chinese Communists, also regained the initiative against the Rok Eighth Division. Both divisions were under violent enemy pressure Monday southeast of Onjung and around Unsan.

Chillicothean, 69, Arrested Here As Drunk Driver

Albert Heidelsperger, 69, of Chillicothe was placed under $200 bond Monday morning by Judge William D. Radcliff in Pickaway common pleas court pending hearing on an accusation of drunken driving.

Heidelsperger was arrested by Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Walter Richards on Route 23 Friday. He pleaded innocent in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root Saturday, was bound over to the grand jury on $200 bond.

County Prosecutor Guy Cline filed an information on Heidelsperger Monday, thus bypassing grand jury action.

The Chillicothe man repeated his plea of innocence before Judge Radcliff, who continued the $200 bond.

Also pleading innocent before Judge Radcliff Monday was Carl Hott of Columbus. He was indicted secretly by the May grand jury for writing a check with sufficient funds in the bank.

Judge Radcliff set bond for Hott at $500.

Ashville Man Hurt On Cycle

Rowland Meadows, 26, of Ashville, was injured late Saturday near Chillicothe when the motorcycle on which he and a Columbus man were riding failed to negotiate a left curve.

Chillicothe state highway patrolmen said the accident occurred on Route 35. The motorcycle turned over after failing to make the curve.

Meadows was reported in good condition Monday in Chillicothe hospital.

Bill Durst, 20, of Columbus, passenger on the wheel, suffered a lacerated hand in the mishap.

Farm Hand, 17, Seriously Hurt By Corn Picker

A 17-year-old farm hand lost his right hand Saturday when the hand became entangled in a corn picker.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff identified the youngster as Herbert Lee Perkins, who had been harvesting corn this Fall on the Fullerton farm three miles west of Fox Postoffice.

The deputy said the accident occurred at between 1 p. m. and 2 p. m. Saturday when the man attempted to clean husks from the machine.

Perkins hand was caught in the narrow picking slot and the gears started to drag his whole arm through the narrow opening.

Perkins saved himself from possibly more serious injury by jamming his right foot into the chain drive of the picker. The action killed the engine of the machine, although he suffered a possible fractured foot in the effort.

The youth was anchored to the machine nearly a half hour before his plight was discovered, Deputy Radcliff said, and he was forced to stand there nearly two hours more while the machine was being dismantled.

Perkins was rushed into Berger hospital for treatment. His right arm was amputated above the wrist.

Economist Says Meat Guarantee Is Present Need

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 — A non-government economist says that the Agriculture Department immediately should guarantee farmers a satisfactory price for meat next year to insure greater production.

Otherwise, he says, there will not be enough meat to fill the demand.

Carl H. Wilken, economic analyst for the Raw Materials National Council, came to those conclusions as a result of a survey he conducted for the National Independent Meat Packers Association.

Wilken's conclusions are in conflict with a forecast made by the Agriculture Department's Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The bureau says that meat production next year will be about three to five percent greater than it was this year.

This, according to the bureau, will supply consumers with an extra three pounds of meat. This year's per capita consumption is estimated at 145 pounds. The bureau says next year's production will provide more civilian meat plus requirements of the armed forces.

But Wilken says that his study of the situation in the Midwest leads him to doubt that there will be any material increase in meat production over this year. Wilken believes that farmer uncertainty as to future prices and the high production and operating costs will hold output down to the 1950 level.

COLUMBUS, Oct. 30 — The dam and reservoir Columbus plans to build will be officially named Hoover dam tonight by city council to honor the city's famed brothers, Charles P. Hoover and the late Clarence B. Hoover.

Clarence Hoover was superintendent of water and upon his death this year was succeeded by his brother, Charles, who had been chief chemist.

PUNISH THEM!

AS THE Korean War draws to an end, sickening accounts of communist atrocities committed upon American prisoners come to hand. U. S. and South Korean armies have raced to the Manchurian border in an attempt to free surviving American captives. What was done to them stands out, in its savage abandon, even among the record of cruelties that Japan wrote in the Philippines and elsewhere in World War I.

There have been atrocities committed upon American and South Korean troops from the beginning of the fighting. Perpetrators of these atrocities, and their superiors who ordered them, ought to be run down in the most relentless manner. If apprehended, either a field court-martial or a formal trial should be instituted. Guilt established, execution should be swift.

The United States has become a stickler for civilized warfare, if such there can be. The German and Italian prisoners held by the U. S. during World War II were well treated. Some Americans thought they were too well treated. But during the Civil War prisoners emerged as emaciated skeletons if they survived their incarceration at all. The British once were notably cruel, and during the Revolutionary War hired savage Indians to take the scalps of the Rebel Colonials, including women and children.

The best that can be said for war is that it is a dreadful thing. There are atrocities in time of peace, but when the organized guns begin shooting in anger, all the niceties of civilization are likely to be forgotten—especially in Asia, where unmorality is notorious.

NEW AMERICAN FRONTIER

GOV. ROY J. Turner of Oklahoma, himself a farmer and rancher, declared recently in a public address that the next "American frontier" would be a return to the land. In recent years the trend has been in the opposite direction, with urban population increasing at a rate which has brought both an economic and a social problem.

To bring this about there must be a constant improvement in the land as the basis for security and prosperity. It is a revival of a theory often advanced in the past that a working alliance between agriculture and industry is the ideal situation for thousands of American citizens. Briefly, it would entail living in the country, on small, self-supporting tracts, and working in industries provided by the cities.

These Days

Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah is a learned man and has written five books. Among them are: "Sukui No Michi" (in Japanese), "Chinese Political Thought," "The Four Fears." It is to "The Four Fears," dated 1944, that we shall devote ourselves.

The four fears are: 1. The fear of entangling alliances; 2. The fear of England; 3. The fear of Russia; 4. The fear of revolution. As a member of the LaFollette committee, run by John Abt, Charles Kramer, Lee Pressman and others of Communist associations, he was without these fears.

On Page 60 of this book, Senator Thomas says:

"All close students of developments in Russia agree that she has given up her early hopes of worldwide revolution in favor of a single Russian Communist state, and that in every respect her first frenzy for the extreme forms of Communism has toned down.

That was not true in 1944; it is not true in 1950. I wonder precisely what close students of Russian affairs Senator Thomas had in mind. He gives no names, so it is impossible to check his sources. Of these unmentioned "close students" Senator Thomas says:

"They point to Stalin's own clear victory over his comrades who refused to confine their aims to Russia; they accept as genuine the abolition of the Comintern; they show Russia's softened attitude toward religion and her stricter laws governing the family and birth control."

Again, we know in 1950 that that was not true in 1944. The Comintern showed up in 1945; Togliatti in Italy, Tito in Yugoslavia, Pauker in Rumania, Duclos in France, Mao Tze-tung in China, and so on over the world. And soon it was all organized under a new name, the "Cominform."

Also, Stalin did not limit his aims to Russia. In November, 1943, at Teheran, he made it clear to Roosevelt and Churchill that he had extensive aims in Europe. Undoubtedly no one told Senator Thomas about that, although he could have read about it, at the time, in this column.

Senator Thomas, in this grand defense of Russia in this chapter, says:

"Her losses in this war are staggering. She has a population of over two hundred million. Her industrialization, still incomplete at the outbreak of the war, will have to be started over again from scratch, with the possible exception of the plants beyond the Urals. She will have to rebuild her cities, hundreds of villages, her roads."

There can be no doubt, in 1950, that all this is nonsense and was nonsense in 1944. Actually, Soviet Russia has pushed steel production beyond anything any pro-Russian optimist believed possible, and she has developed an atomic industry which menaces us. She stole our bomb before Senator Thomas wrote his book. Actually, she has been able to finance and equip war in China, Korea and French Indo-China, and who knows where next?

NEW YORK—There is no rage comparable to that which held the writer as he sat there on the edge of the damp and crumbling pier, in the early autumn night, and looked out at the cool blackness of the East river and the lights of Brooklyn across the way.

No rage, not even the violent indignation a man feels when he has been cheated, or the sad and desperate anger he feels when he learns his woman has not kept to the rules of the game. The inside fury of the writer came from his impotence as an artist, this night, this hour, this minute.

The function of the artist is simple. A thing that is beautiful—a sound, a shape, a color, a truth—comes to him, inside, and he must, with the means at his disposal, show it to other people. If he is a good artist, what he draws or writes or plays will appear to other people as it first appeared to him.

However, sometimes the beauty is too great and the artist is too small to show it, and that is what the writer felt as he sat there on the rotting timbers. His sad and outraged thoughts, with only the hooting of a tugboat whistle for obbligato, went something like this:

HE LOOKED UP AT THE SUBWAY TRAINS passing on the bridge like children's toys, and noticed that when each car hit a certain dead spot in the rails, its lights went out. For a half second, he thought, they will look up in bewilderment from their newspapers, they will peer uncertainly out of their car windows and get one fleeting glimpse of the beauty. Then the lights will come on and they will return to the absorbing and important details of what has happened to justice, in the Sunday supplements.

Then he looked away, and for a moment the rage swept over him. He dug his fingernails into his palms and he poked frantically around in his mind for one last time, but there were no words, no fine thoughts to tell of the beauty.

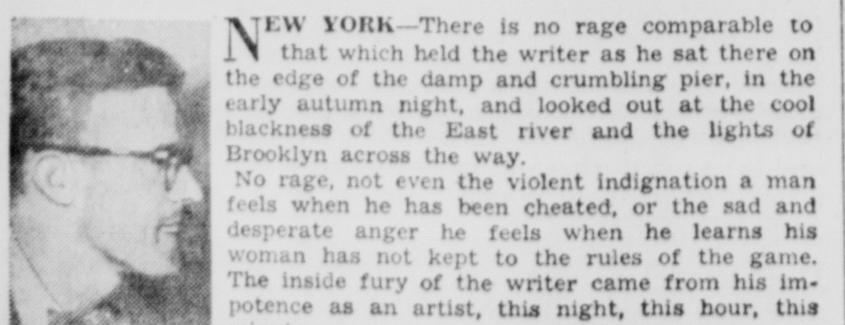

Then he relaxed and he stood up on the pier and looked for the last time at the black river. Maybe it is enough that you feel this way, he said; maybe you never meant to tell it to the others, but even as he thought it, he knew it was a lie.

All the way home, and even later when he lay on his bed in the city night, listening to the noises, he knew he had been in the presence of beauty and that he never could tell of it and that as an artist, he had failed.

That much was easy for the writer. The river, he said quietly and bitterly to himself, is a stream of fresh pitch stirring in the night. The tug that passes is a firefly on the surface of the stag-

Does Allergy Cause Migraine?

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

BY no means are all of our unsolved medical problems new. Many ailments for which we are still seeking remedies today are known to have plagued mankind since the dawn of history.

Among these is migraine, first described as "sick headache" about 3000 B. C. It has puzzled doctors through all the centuries since that time and even modern medical science with all its knowledge and fine research tools has not been able to discover just why these one-sided headaches occur.

Between Attacks

People who have migraine are perfectly well between attacks but when afflicted, they are about as miserable as it is possible to be. The headache itself is throbbing and severe and it is usually ushered in by disturbances of vision and blurring of the eyesight. During the attack there is a feeling of sickness of the stomach, usually with vomiting as the pain reaches its peak.

Modern medical science believes that a tendency to such headaches is inherited, since the ailments seem to run in families. But this inheritance is not enough in itself to produce the attacks, which seem to be set off by a number of different "trigger factors."

Numerous Doctors

Recently numerous doctors have come to the conclusion that in many cases the headaches are caused by an allergic reaction to some food. Those who have headaches as often as once a month are believed to be sensitive to foods eaten daily, such as milk, wheat, or eggs. Thus, in preventing attacks of migraine, it is important to find the foods to which the person is sensitive and to eliminate them from his diet. One way of doing this is to have the patient keep records of all foods eaten in the 24-hour periods before attacks. These records are then compared to see if some foods have been eaten prior to several attacks, and of course these foods are eliminated.

Another method is to place the patient on what is called an elimination diet. In such a diet, the patient uses just one type of foods at a time for several days. If a certain class of foods seems to bring on the attacks, then these foods are eliminated.

General Health

Other measures to be employed are to build up the general health, to correct any defects of the eyesight, and to aid in the avoidance of mental and physical strain, since these things also may bring on an attack.

Various drugs, particularly those similar to ergotamine tartrate, may ward off an attack, or at least make the attack milder. Injections of sodium nicotinate have also been found helpful.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

N. N.: When my mother gets up in the morning her fingers are stiff. What causes this?

Answer: Stiffness of the fingers may be due to chronic arthritis, or inflammation of the joints. It might also be due to some disturbance of the circulation, or the nervous system. Examination by the physician to find the cause is required.

Tigers To Play Underdog Role In Final Home Game

Circleville's Red and Black football team will have its work cut out for it this week.

For the first time in three seasons the Tigers will be cast in the role of underdog.

The CHS'ers will be out to play the part of giant killers Thursday when Westerville brings its unmailed grid record to the local gridiron.

In addition, the game will be important to the CHS'ers for another reason. The tussle against Westerville will be their last home game of the 1950 season.

Westerville maintained its unbeaten record last Friday by handing Marysville gridders a meager 14-13 defeat.

Both teams had been undefeated prior to the meeting and only Westerville emerged unscathed—by a one-point margin.

TIGER COACH Steve Brudzinski made a personal scout of the Westerville talents last Friday.

"They're pretty tough," said

Ostrich Races Flop As Star Bird Dies

SALEM, N. H., Oct. 30.—A series of ostrich exhibition races scheduled at Rockingham Park was crossed off the park program today because of the death of one of the expensive birds.

"Big Jim," one of the famous racing ostriches owned by Jim Casper of St. Augustine, Fla., died at the park of pneumonia. The bird was valued by its owner at $10,000.

The bird and another ostrich, "Hot Shot," had been unable to eat since their arrival at the park. They were homesick and bothered by the colder weather.

Track Director Lou Smith cancelled the ostrich racing program when "Big Jim" died and made arrangements to return the other ostrich to Florida.

An ostrich egg breakfast is scheduled for the turf writers in the club house dining room this morning also was called off.

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce Monday launched an all-out "Get out the Vote Campaign" designed to reach every eligible voter in Pickaway County with an appeal to vote in the election on Tuesday, November 7.

Henry Reid, chairman of the Jaycee "Get Out the Vote Campaign," cited that "voting in a free election is a priceless American heritage and there would be a revolution if it were even threatened." He added:

Yet, in 1948, almost half of the eligible voters in America voluntarily threw this priceless freedom away by not appearing at the polls."

He stated that in Ohio alone there were a million and a half people who could have voted and didn't. This number could swing any election. He showed that 8,750 persons, or 46 percent of the eligible voters in Pickaway County, did not even vote for President in 1948. He asked:

"Under these conditions how can you expect to get any definite statement of opinion at the polls?" Then he added:

"In international affairs we lead the world in spreading Democracy. We are advocating Democracy in Germany, and in their first election 40 percent more Germans voted than did Americans in the 1948 presidential election."

"IN THE EARLY days of this Republic, 80 percent or more of the voters went to the polls. Yet today in these trying times when issues can mean life or death to our country and freedom, our percentage of votes is dropping off."

"This astounding apathy has become a grave concern to leaders of both political parties. Why won't Americans vote?"

"At the ballot box are decided the issues which pattern the lives of every man, woman, and child of this nation. Here are chosen the national, state, and local leaders to make and administer our laws. Yet, elections are often being decided by those who stay away from the polls rather than by those who actually mark their ballots."

"This can change our free government to government of PART of the people by PART of the people and for PART of the people."

Reid says that posters urging that everyone vote are being distributed by Jaycees to local merchants for display in their store windows.

Leaflets will be dropped from airplanes citing the importance of voting. Newspaper ads will be run. Voting slogans will be painted on downtown sidewalks. Industries will be contacted urging them to give every employee a chance to vote. Organizations will also be contacted. All this is included in the Jaycee campaign, Reid said.

SERVING ON the committee with Reid are Donald Crist, Paul Campbell, Richard Plum, R. L. Bremer Jr. and Tom Harden.

"The Jaycees," Reid stated, "feel that if all the citizenry exercise its right to vote this year, the issues and candidates will be selected intelligently. We feel it is not only the right, but also the responsibility of every eligible voter to go to the polls and vote on Nov. 7 according to his convictions."

Puerto Ricans Revolt

Mass Jailbreak Adds To Unrest

SAN JUAN, Oct. 30—A Nationalist revolt against the Puerto Rican government of Governor Luis Munoz Marin broke out today.

Initial reports said that eight towns are affected by the uprising.

The movement followed a mass jailbreak by 60 desperados who shot their way out of a trap and are still at large, striking terror into Puerto Rico's countryside.

It was not established immediately whether the jailbreak was connected with the uprising.

Nationalists who favored severance of relations with the United States, stormed the governor's palace.

The attack on the official residence of the governor was followed by gun firing in the streets.

At least five persons were killed and a number wounded in various parts of the island.

The Nationalists are led by a Harvard graduate named Pedro Albizu Campos, who with seven colleagues spent six years in Atlanta Penitentiary on charges of attempting to depose the government by force.

His followers refuse to serve in the U. S. Army. They maintained that it is "an army of occupation from a foreign country."

The government's palace in San Juan, known as La Fortaleza, was built in 1507 and was the former residence of Spanish governors. Nearby is El Morro, where U. S. Army barracks are located, and the Casa Rosada headquarters of the U. S. military mission.

Before Puerto Rican authorities announced the outbreak, police searched the house of a Nationalist leader named Muniz in Ponce. They seized a large arsenal of guns, rifles and chemicals used in the making of "Molotov cocktails."

While Puerto Ricans are automatically citizens of the United States, the country now is virtually self-governed.

UNTIL 1947, Puerto Rico was under direct supervision of the United States Congress and the President of the U. S. was responsible for appointment of the governor.

In that year, President Truman signed an amendment to the Organic Act of Puerto Rico, which was drafted in 1917, providing for the election of the governor by the voters of the island.

Puerto Rico is represented in the United States by a resident commissioner who has a voice in the House of Representatives in Washington, but no vote.

Another 47 of the 107 criminals who escaped from Rio Piedras prison Saturday are back in custody.

National Guardsmen in San Juan were alerted and the civilian population was urged to remain indoors until the escaped convicts, some of them murderers serving life terms, can be run down.

The police trapped the desperados on a hill along the road between Caguas and Rio Piedras about 10 miles south of San Juan.

But the criminals, many of them veterans, staged a military-style withdrawal under the cover of darkness and the fire of sharp-shooting rear guard.

The prison break, carried out with brutal precision, started with a simulated riot among the prisoners which drew the guards from their posts.

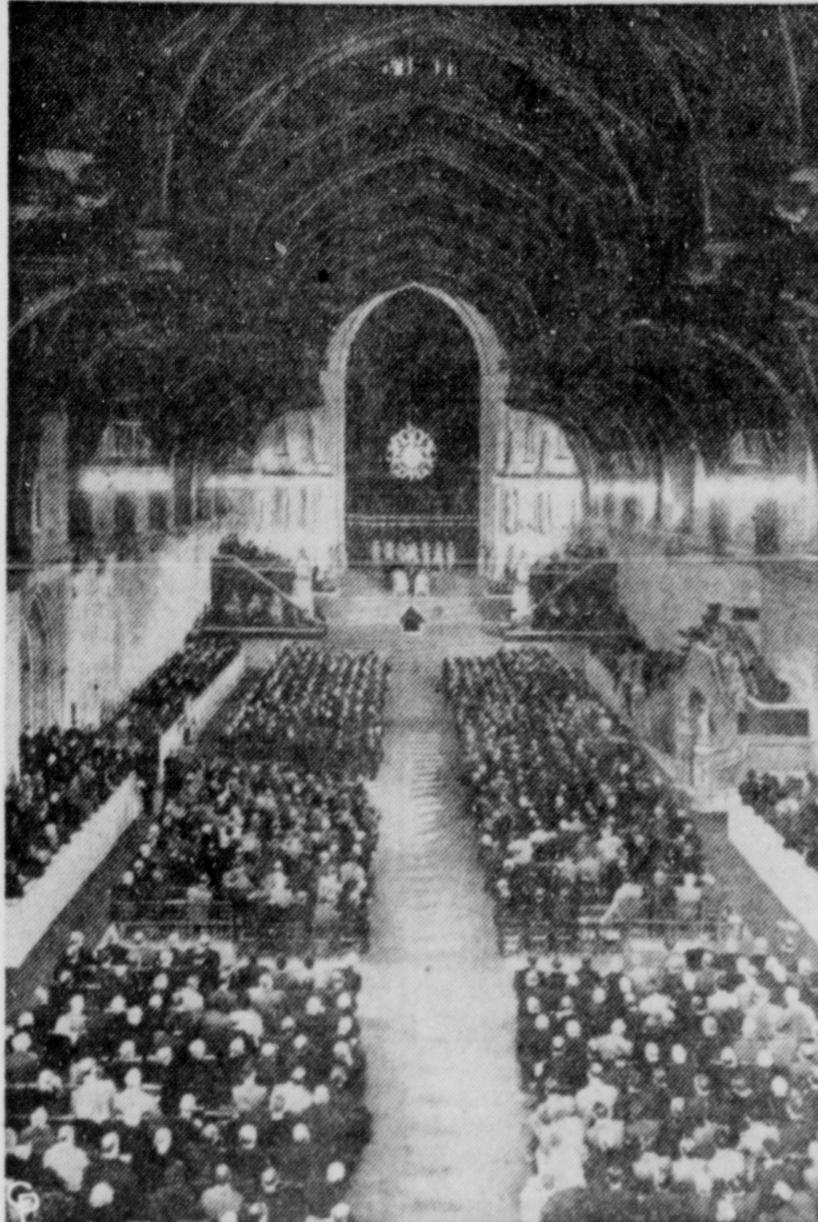

The convicts then fell upon the guards, killing two and wounding five.

The escapees raided the prison arsenal and armed themselves heavily before breaking beyond the walls to freedom.

Silent Screen Star Is Dead

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 30—The name of Maurice Costello was missing today from the dwindling list of living movie pioneers.

Costello, the original "great lover" of the silent screen, one of the first men to be starred in pictures and the father of the former stars, Dolores and Helene Costello, died yesterday. He was 74.

NATION EYES OUTCOME

Big Steel's Wage Hike Parley Is Continuing

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 30—U. S. Steel and the CIO-United Steelworkers resume bargaining talks today on the union's 1950 wage demands.

The talks, which got underway here Friday, are still in the general discussion stage, with the company yet to make an offer in reply to the union's request for a "healthy and substantial" pay hike.

The conferences here are being watched with intense interest by all employers and unions in the nation since any Big Steel wage increase probably will be duplicated elsewhere.

Discussions Friday revolved around what to talk about. Although only wage adjustments may be discussed at this time, under terms of the two-year contract, the union has submitted five additional goals.

These include severance pay, geographical wage differences, improved overtime, shift premiums, and inequities in the iron ore and non-ferrous mining divisions.

U. S. STEEL HAS offered to listen to anything the union has to say on these matters, but has stipulated this in no way compels the corporation to bargain on anything but wages.

Presumably "money talk" will get down to serious discussion after the negotiating teams are whittled down to "hotel-room" size.

USW President Philip Murray and John Stephens, U. S. Steel vice-president and chief bargainer, currently are flanked by teams of about 35 men each.

The Steelworkers have held preliminary talks with some 35 other steel firms besides Big Steel.

Attention is focused on U. S. Steel, however, because it generally sets the pattern for the nation's nearly a million steelworkers employed in 1,400 steel plants.

Murray is reported seeking between 25 and 30 cents an hour increase in the basic rate, while Iron Age, bible of the industry, predicts he will get 12 1/2 to 13 cents an hour, plus five cents in fringe concessions.

Tito Praises U.S., Slaps At Soviet Circle

BELGRADE, Oct. 30—Marshal Tito aligned his country today on the side of those resisting aggression and assured the Yugoslav people that American food shipments will prevent mass starvation.

Speaking at Zagreb Sunday, at the opening congress of the Anti-Fascist Women's Organization, the Yugoslav leader said:

"Those who are for peace can be sure they always will have us at their side. Those collaborating for aggression will always have us against them."

He praised the generosity of the United States in giving food to the Yugoslav people who are faced with the worst drought in 50 years but denied that any "strings" are attached to the aid.

He took an oblique slap at Russia and her satellites when he declared:

"All constructive forces of the world favor the aid given our country and we asked aid from the side we knew was willing to give it and not from the side we knew would not."

CAMPAIGN ROLLING INTO FINAL DAYS

Taft And Lausche Tagged At 6 To 5 To Be Winners In Next Week's Poll

COLUMBUS, Oct. 30—Ohio swung into its last full week of its election campaign today with Sen. Robert A. Taft, a Republican, and Gov. Frank J. Lausche, a Democrat, holding a slight betting edge.

Generally, the two were held at a 6-to-5 advantage over State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson and State Treasurer Don H. Ebright respectively.

It appears now—subject to later correction—that Ohioans will keep the senator and governor they have rather than promote two other office-holders to the highest state jobs.

Ferguson meanwhile wired Sen. Guy Gillette, president of the Senate Committee on Privileges and Elections, asking that the committee come into Ohio before the Nov. 7 balloting and investigate campaign expenditures—meaning, of course, Taft's.

A TAFT AIDE in Cincinnati welcomed the thought of the probe although referring to it as "a last minute effort to becloud the issues of this campaign."

The aide, Campaign Manager Willis D. Gradison, declared:

"However, such an investigation should first start with the millions of dollars raised by the CIO-PAC, the AFL, and other unions all over the country to be used in Ohio to defeat Senator Taft. These facts have been well known and widely publicized for more than a year."

Gradison recalled the statement of AFL President William Green on Aug. 23, 1949: "Cost what it may, we're going to bring about the defeat of this most reprehensible, notorious Senator Taft—we'll defeat him with money."

Cleveland, which casts about one-fifth of the total vote, is going to receive a great deal of attention in this final week.

Ferguson moved in yesterday and although leaving for a short swing through the coal fields of Eastern Ohio today, the state auditor will be back to spend the remainder of the week in the state's biggest city.

25 Koreans Executed

Firing Squad Fells Communist Aides

SEOUL, Oct. 30—Twenty-three men and two women were lined up and shot to death Sunday afternoon for having collaborated with the North Korean Communists.

It was a bungled job and not a pretty one.

The 25, first of 82 persons sentenced to death in the first seven days of collaboration trials in Seoul, were led from the red brick-walled jail on a peaceful Sabbath afternoon, tied together and driven to the place of death—a stony hillside eight miles from town.

There, 20 of them, including the two women, were lined up and a like number of soldiers in the firing squad turned their American M-1 rifles upon them. Those who did not die immediately were killed by repeated shot from close range.

Captain Kim En Whan, in charge of the execution, helped administer the coup de grace with his pistol.

When the 20 were disposed of, the remaining five were led past the bodies and summarily shot.

Unlike the first group they were not given a last cigarette. Neither did time permit them to chant:

"Long live the Korean republic."

That feeble cry was given by the 20 as they stood before the firing squad.

During the trip from the jail to the execution ground the condemned squatted on their haunches in open trucks between two rows of soldiers.

The prisoners were required to keep their heads on their knees. On several occasions the prisoners tried to raise their heads slightly to catch a glimpse of the countryside and were rewarded by a blow on the head from a soldier's rifle butt.

Attention is focused on U. S. Steel, however, because it generally sets the pattern for the nation's nearly a million steelworkers employed in 1,400 steel plants.

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 30—King Gustav VI, new monarch of grieving Sweden, took a formal oath today as successor to his father, Gustav V, who died Sunday in the 43rd year of his reign.

The 67-year-old Former Crown Prince Gustav Adolf took on his duties at a simple ceremony which the late king, who died at 92, substituted for the ancient, more formal and costly coronation rites.

At the same cabinet-royal council meeting, the new king received pledges of allegiance from members of the royal family, the cabinet, leaders of the armed forces and other high officials.

Prime Minister Tage Erlander submitted the resignation of his cabinet, but the new monarch is expected to ask him to remain in office.

Meanwhile, members of the royal staff mounted guard at the bier of the late king, a vigil which will be maintained until the time of the funeral which will take place before Nov. 12 but probably sometime after Nov. 9.

Probably on Wednesday, the body will be taken from Drottningholm Castle where the king died, to the royal chapel in Stockholm Castle.

Speaking at Zagreb Sunday, at the opening congress of the Anti-Fascist Women's Organization, the Yugoslav leader said:

"Those who are for peace can be sure they always will have us at their side. Those collaborating for aggression will always have us against them."

He praised the generosity of the United States in giving food to the Yugoslav people who are faced with the worst drought in 50 years but denied that any "strings" are attached to the aid.

Having lost 16 pounds owing to a meager rice diet, he recuperates in the sunshine in Tokyo, while Miss Jelsch does double-duty by "babysitting" a bashful Japanese tot.

Ferguson continued his attack on Taft's voting record and pledged he would work for "all the people of Ohio."

Ebright also concentrated on Northern Ohio, starting his week off with a family reunion—on television.

The treasurer met his wife, son and daughter in Toledo, with Mrs. Ebright relating her experiences in canvassing 70 of the 88 counties for her husband.

Ebright said he liked to think of government as "a family affair," in which all would join for their mutual benefit. The son and daughter told of their activities among the younger folk.

Taft, also in Cleveland, declared that he favors educational, persuasive fair employment practices legislation over a compulsory FEPC program.

In answer to a question which followed a speech, Taft stated: "You will recall that mine was the first FEPC bill introduced in the Senate, and it is far more likely that the Republicans can pass this type of legislation than the Democrats with their southern affiliations.

Taft added that "if I am mistaken, the other methods can be tried."

Communists Open New Power Jab

Chinese Aid Reports Mount

SEOUL, Oct. 31—(Tuesday)—U. S. troops were rushing today to rescue two South Korean divisions rolled back by a Communist counter-drive amid reports an additional Chinese Red regiment has been thrown into battle below the Manchurian border.

Strong enemy resistance was encountered along the entire 210-mile front across North Korea where some 130,000 United Nations troops battled to reach the Yalu river boundary and end the Korean war.

The heaviest fighting erupted in Northwest Korea as an estimated 10,000 Reds, reportedly including many Chinese Communist soldiers masquerading in North Korean uniforms, recaptured Onjeng and assaulted Unsan.

The U. S. First Cavalry Division's tank-led Eighth Regiment, bringing mobile guns, was hurrying north to the Onjeng-Usan area to succor the hard-pressed Rok (Republic of Korea) Sixth and Eighth Divisions.

From Northeast Korea, meanwhile, a dispatch by International News Photos Cameraman Irwin Tress quoted a U. S. 10th Corps headquarters spokesman as saying 20 prisoners identified as Chinese Communists were reportedly taken Monday night.

THE PRISONERS were captured by Rok Third Division troops, driving against armor-supported enemy resistance upon the Chosin reservoir near Pungsan.

The 10th Corps officer told of reports that a full Chinese army regiment is fighting in Northeast Korea against UN forces. The spokesman said corps headquarters is awaiting further reports on this unit as well as on other Chinese Red groups reported unconfirmedly to be in action in the Northeast Korean area.

The prisoners taken by the Rok Third Division were reportedly to have told interrogators they were part of a Chinese division which has thrust spearheads to within only 25 miles northwest of Hamhung. The division, the prisoners were quoted as adding, has orders to retake Hamhung, a major eastern port, by Wednesday.

Northeast of Hamhung, meanwhile, a Red guerrilla force was reported to have cut the main supply route paralleling the coast up to Songjin, beyond which Rok Capitol Division troops have driven within 133 miles of the Korean-Soviet Siberian border.

At the opposite end of the flaming front, the British Commonwealth 27th Brigade completed the capture of Chongju after savage street fighting against stubbornly resisting Reds who then retreated to the northwest.

Thereupon, the British Commonwealth troops were supplemented by U. S. 24th Division units which proceeded to carry on the advance beyond Chongju up the western seaboard toward the Manchurian border, 50 miles away.

INLAND FROM Chongju, the 24th Division's Fifth Regiment ran into stiffened Communist opposition as the Americans thrust within two miles of Kusong, 35 miles below the Yalu international boundary.

From American First Corps headquarters, INS War Correspondent John Rich reported in an early Tuesday front dispatch that the battle-seasoned U. S. 24th was slowed in its advance on Kusong by Red artillery, mortars and landmines.

On the 24th east flank, a regiment of the Rok First Division was attacked by a unit of 400 enemy troops. The onslaught was repulsed by artillery and small arms fire.

Rich related that spreading underbrush fires, touched off by igniting gunpowder, broke out in the 24th Division's sector between Chongju and Tae-chon, filling the area with a thick pall of smoke.

The Rok Sixth Division was pushed out of Ojong and thrown into broken retreat Sunday after losing 30 percent of its men and much of its equipment in three days of furious combat.

It was the first important setback suffered by United Nations forces since the breakout from Southeast Korea's Pusan beachhead six weeks ago to launch the offensive into North Korea.

On the Rok Sixth Division's right flank, the North Korean Reds, also reportedly reinforced by Chinese Communists, also regained the initiative against the Rok Eighth Division. Both divisions were under violent enemy pressure Monday southeast of Onjung and around Unsan.

Chillicothean, 69, Arrested Here As Drunk Driver

Heidelsperger was arrested by Pickaway County Deputy Sheriff Walter Richards on Route 23 Friday. He pleaded innocent in the court of Magistrate Oscar Root Saturday, was bound over to the grand jury on $200 bond.

County Prosecutor Guy Cline filed an information on Heidelsperger Monday, thus bypassing grand jury action.

The Chillicothe man repeated his plea of innocence before Judge Radcliff, who continued the $200 bond.

Also pleading innocent before Judge Radcliff Monday was Carl Hott of Columbus. He was indicted secretly by the May grand jury for writing a check with sufficient funds in the bank.

Judge Radcliff set bond for Hott at $500.

Farm Hand, 17, Seriously Hurt By Corn Picker

A 17-year-old farm hand lost his right hand Saturday when the hand became entangled in a corn picker.

Deputy Sheriff Carl Radcliff identified the youngster as Herbert Lee Perkins, who had been harvesting corn this Fall on the Fullerton farm three miles west of Fox Postoffice.

The deputy said the accident occurred at between 1 p. m. and 2 p. m. Saturday when the man attempted to clean husks from the machine.

Perkins hand was caught in the narrow picking slot and the gears started to drag his whole arm through the narrow opening.

Perkins saved himself from possibly more serious injury by jamming his right foot into the chain drive of the picker. The action killed the engine of the machine, although he suffered a possibly fractured foot in the effort.

The youth was anchored to the machine nearly a half hour before his plight was discovered, Deputy Radcliff said, and he was forced to stand there nearly two hours more while the machine was being dismantled.

Perkins was rushed into Berger hospital for treatment. His right arm was amputated above the wrist.

ONE MINUTE PULPIT

Only God can do this. Some have tried to attain this end by accumulating wealth, or gaining fame or popularity only to find they have spent a life time gathering ashes. He satisfies the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.—Psa. 107:9.

PUNISH THEM!

AS THE Korean War draws to an end, sickening accounts of communist atrocities committed upon American prisoners come to hand. U. S. and South Korean armies have raced to the Manchurian border in an attempt to free surviving American captives. What was done to them stands out, in its savage abandon, even among the record of cruelties that Japan wrote in the Philippines and elsewhere in World War II.

There have been atrocities committed upon American and South Korean troops from the beginning of the fighting. Perpetrators of these atrocities, and their superiors who ordered them, ought to be run down in the most relentless manner. If apprehended, either a field court-martial or a formal trial should be instituted. Guilt established, execution should be swift.

The United States has become a stickler for civilized warfare, if such there can be. The German and Italian prisoners held by the U. S. during World War II were well treated. Some Americans thought they were too well treated. But during the Civil War prisoners emerged as emaciated skeletons if they survived their incarceration at all. The British once were notably cruel, and during the Revolutionary War hired savage Indians to take the scalps of the Rebel Colonials, including women and children.

The best that can be said for war is that it is a dreadful thing. There are atrocities in time of peace, but when the organized guns begin shooting in anger, all the niceties of civilization are likely to be forgotten—especially in Asia, where unmorality is notorious.

NEW AMERICAN FRONTIER

GOV. ROY J. Turner of Oklahoma, himself a farmer and rancher, declared recently in a public address that the next "American frontier" would be a return to the land. In recent years the trend has been in the opposite direction, with urban population increasing at a rate which has brought both an economic and a social problem.

To bring this about there must be a constant improvement in the land as the basis for security and prosperity. It is a revival of a theory often advanced in the past that a working alliance between agriculture and industry is the ideal situation for thousands of American citizens. Briefly, it would entail living in the country, on small, self-supporting tracts, and working in industries provided by the cities.

These Days

Senator Elbert D. Thomas of Utah is a learned man and has written five books. Among them are: "Sukui No Michi" (in Japanese), "Chinese Political Thought," "The Four Fears." It is to "The Four Fears," dated 1944, that we shall devote ourselves.

The four fears are: 1. The fear of entangling alliances; 2. The fear of England; 3. The fear of Russia; 4. The fear of revolution. As a member of the LaFollette committee, run by John Abt, Charles Kramer, Lee Pressman and others of Communist associations, he was without these fears.

On Page 60 of this book, Senator Thomas says:

"All close students of developments in Russia agree that she has given up her early hopes of worldwide revolution in favor of a single Russian Communist state, and that in every respect her first frenzy for the extreme forms of Communism has toned down.

That was not true in 1944; it is not true in 1950. I wonder precisely what close students of Russian affairs Senator Thomas had in mind. He gives no names, so it is impossible to check his sources. Of these unmentioned "close students" Senator Thomas says:

"They point to Stalin's own clear victory over his comrades who refused to confine their aims to Russia; they accept as genuine the abolition of the Comintern; they show Russia's softened attitude toward religion and her stricter laws governing the family and birth control."

Again, we know in 1950 that that was not true in 1944. The Comintern showed up in 1945; Togliatti in Italy, Tito in Yugoslavia, Pauker in Rumania, Duclos in France, Mao Tze-tung in China, and so on over the world. And soon it was all organized under a new name, the "Cominform."

Also, Stalin did not limit his aims to Russia. In November, 1943, at Teheran, he made it clear to Roosevelt and Churchill that he had extensive aims in Europe. Undoubtedly no one told Senator Thomas about that, although he could have read about it, at the time, in this column.

Senator Thomas, in this grand defense of Russia in this chapter, says:

"Her losses in this war are staggering. She has a population of over two hundred million. Her industrialization, still incomplete at the outbreak of the war, will have to be started over again from scratch, with the possible exception of the plants beyond the Urals. She will have to rebuild her cities, hundreds of villages, her roads."

There can be no doubt, in 1950, that all this is nonsense and was nonsense in 1944. Actually, Soviet Russia has pushed steel production beyond anything any pro-Russian optimist believed possible, and she has developed an atomic industry which menaces us. She stole our bomb before Senator Thomas wrote his book. Actually, she has been able to finance and equip war in China, Korea and French Indo-China, and who knows where next?

My New York
By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—There is no rage comparable to that which held the writer as he sat there on the edge of the damp and crumbling pier, in the early autumn night, and looked out at the cool blackness of the East river and the lights of Brooklyn across the way.

No rage, not even the violent indignation a man feels when he has been cheated, or the sad and desperate anger he feels when he learns his woman has not kept to the rules of the game. The inside fury of the writer came from his impotence as an artist, this night, this hour, this minute.

The function of the artist is simple. A thing that is beautiful—a sound, a shape, a color, a truth—comes to him, inside, and he must, with the means at his disposal, show it to other people. If he is a good artist, what he draws or writes or plays will appear to other people as it first appeared to him.

However, sometimes the beauty is too great and the artist is too small to show it, and that is what the writer felt as he sat there on the rotting timbers. His sad and outraged thoughts, with only the hooting of a tugboat whistle for obligato, went something like this:

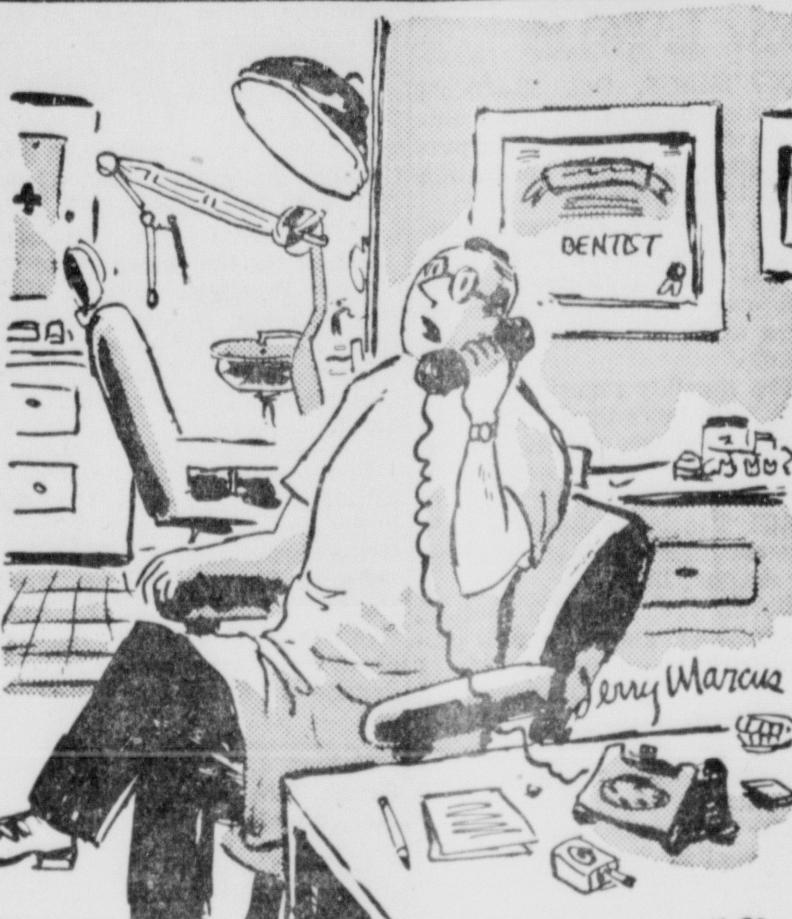

I am too small.

In the beginning, this shore, this place, was a mud bank with trees, and Brooklyn across the way was a sandy flat. The river was a clear and swift-running one and if you were there in the beginning it was like a thousand other places on God's earth, no more beautiful, no less. More beautiful to man, at least, if not to a dock rat.

To the north and across the dangerous black current, the navy yard was a tangle of indirect lights and darkened superstructures of battleships, and to the south there were bridges hung across the river like the festoons on Christmas trees. Subway trains rattled across one of the bridges with a faraway roar, and far below the bridges you could see the lady with the lamp, green and bright and theatrical in her floodlights as she stood motionless in the bay.

That much was easy for the writer. The river, he said quietly and bitterly to himself, is a stream of fresh pitch stirring in the night. The tug that passes is a firefly on the surface of the stag-

Does Allergy Cause Migraine?

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

BY NO MEANS are all of our unsolved medical problems new. Many ailments for which we are still seeking remedies today are known to have plagued mankind since the dawn of history.

Among these is migraine, first described as "sick headache" about 3000 B. C. It has puzzled doctors through all the centuries since that time and even modern medical science with all its knowledge and fine research tools has not been able to discover just why these one-sided headaches occur.

Between Attacks

People who have migraine are perfectly well between attacks but when afflicted, they are about as miserable as it is possible to be. The headache itself is throbbing and severe and it is usually ushered in by disturbances of vision and blurring of the eyesight. During the attack there is a feeling of sickness of the stomach, usually with vomiting as the pain reaches its peak.

Modern medical science believes that a tendency to such headaches is inherited, since all ailments seem to run in families. But this inheritance is not enough in itself to produce the attacks, which seem to be set off by a number of different "trigger factors."

Numerous Doctors

Recently numerous doctors have come to the conclusion that in many cases the headaches are caused by an allergic reaction to some food. Those who have headaches as often as once a month are believed to be sensitive to foods eaten daily, such as milk, wheat, or eggs. Thus, in preventing attacks of migraine, it is important to find the foods to which the person is sensitive and to eliminate them from his diet. One way of doing this is to have the patient keep records of all foods eaten in the 24-hour periods before attacks. These records are then compared to see if some foods have been eaten prior to several attacks, and of course these foods are eliminated.

Another method is to place the patient on what is called an elimination diet. In such a diet, the patient uses just one type of foods at a time for several days. If a certain class of foods seems to bring on the attacks, then these foods are eliminated.

General Health

Other measures to be employed are to build up the general health, to correct any defects of the eyesight, and to aid in the avoidance of mental and physical strain, since these things also may bring on an attack.

Various drugs, particularly those similar to ergotamine tartrate, may ward off an attack, or at least make the attack milder. Injections of sodium nicotinate have also been found helpful.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

N. N.: When my mother gets up in the morning her fingers are stiff. What causes this?

Answer: Stiffness of the fingers may be due to chronic arthritis, or inflammation of the joints. It might also be due to some disturbance of the circulation, or the nervous system. Examination by the physician to find the cause is required.

LOOK OUT for LIZA

"prefer to make my own mistakes."

"It will be fun," said Fleming warmly, "and give you something to do."

"Precisely," said Liza dreamily. Going home, Mrs. Elsmen confided to her husband that Liza Lennox was the queerest combination of recklessness and thrift she had ever met: "when I think of the rent she'll pay. Have you any idea what it is?"

He was to the penny, Liza having told him during dinner.

"Good heavens!" said Mrs. Elsmen, aghast.

"It's a costly neighborhood," he reminded her, "and a spacious apartment. She was lucky to find it. It would have been rented long ago except that it needs redecoration, which the management isn't willing to do, and because of the dinner... But she can afford dinner."

He laughed a little. "I foresee that there will probably be a trustees' meeting before a year's up. George foresaw contingencies. His instructions were to indulge her, if possible. He discussed the terms of the trusteeship with me, before setting it up. He said, 'I don't think Liza will live beyond her income but, at any time, there is something she badly wants, then she's to have it, provided it won't make her unhappy in the long run.'"

"He must have been terribly in trouble?" said Fleming, "but I thought that you should approve."

"She looked at them anxiously. And then smiled. 'For I hope you will be there often,' she said.

The apartment was on the eighteenth floor, in a comparatively new building on the East Side. It had fine proportions. There were not many rooms, but all she had specified, and large. There were two terraces.

"It's lovely," said Mrs. Elsmen, an amiable, amiable woman, "but isn't it a little big for you, my dear?"

"I don't think so. I hope Abby will come stay with me, and George's daughters, when they can. So I wanted a guest room."

There were servants' quarters in another part of the building, she explained.

"But when no one is visiting you," said Mrs. Elsmen, "won't you be terribly alone?"

Liza said, "I suppose so."

She looked around the bare place, the overhead lights seeming harsh, and herself very small and defenseless under them. She added, "When it's redecorated it will be different. And when it's furnished."

"You do have furniture, Liza?" asked Dr. Fleming.

"Just personal things."

"My dear," cried Mrs. Elsmen, "I know a wonderful little decorator."

Liza shook her shining, black head. She said, "I'd like to do it myself. I like mixed-up periods and colors and—" she shrugged.

and, to many, unobtainable. His mother had managed a good preparatory school for him and then he had gone into the bank in a lowly capacity. He was now a vice-president. He lived well, if conservatively; his investments were sound, and he enjoyed his freedom. He had been tepidly in love several times, during earlier years, but always when he couldn't afford marriage.

Dr. Fleming said abruptly, "Are you speculating on Liza Lennox?"

"After a fashion, I suppose," admitted Hiram, who was friendly, if not intimate, with Fleming. "I've been your doctor, off and on, for some time. I could easily prescribe Liza for you, as just what the doctor ordered. But I wouldn't prescribe you for Liza."

"Why not?" inquired Hiram indignantly.

"Oh, I know you are eminently eligible," said Fleming, "but you're too old for her."

"Come, come," said Mason, "aren't you forgetting George?"

"No, George was unique. I never thought of the passage of years in connection with him. Now, if I were younger," he said, sighing, "I would promise Liza the moon and stars from practice in order

Tigers To Play Underdog Role In Final Home Game

Circleville's Red and Black football team will have its work cut out for it this week.

For the first time in three seasons the Tigers will be cast in the role of underdog.

The CHS'ers will be out to play the part of giant killers Thursday when Westerville brings its unmarred grid record to the local gridiron.

In addition, the game will be important to the CHS'ers for another reason. The tussle against Westerville will be their last home game of the 1950 season.

Westerville maintained its unbeaten record last Friday by handing Marysville gridders a meager 14-13 defeat.

Both teams had been undefeated prior to the meeting and only Westerville emerged unscathed—by a one-point margin.

TIGER COACH Steve Brudzinski made a personal scout of the Westerville talents last Friday. "They're pretty tough," said

Ostrich Races Flop As Star Bird Dies

SALEM, N. H., Oct. 30.—A series of ostrich exhibition races scheduled at Rockingham Park was crossed off the park program today because of the death of one of the expensive birds.

"Big Jim," one of the famous racing ostriches owned by Jim Casper of St. Augustine, Fla., died at the park of pneumonia. The bird was valued by its owner at $10,000.

The bird and another ostrich, "Hot Shot," had been unable to eat since their arrival at the park. They were homesick and bothered by the colder weather.

Track Director Lou Smith cancelled the ostrich racing program when "Big Jim" died and made arrangements to return the other ostrich to Florida.

An ostrich egg breakfast scheduled for the turf writers in the club house dining room this morning also was called off.

a personal triumph for Owner Ted Collins, who heretofore had seen his teams play to empty houses. A crowd of 48,642 showed up for the Yankee Stadium thriller.

There is a new alignment in the American division of the league.

Philadelphia's Eagles moved into sole possession of first place, the New York Giants tumbled to third and the Cleveland Browns edged up into second place.

The Eagles thumped the Washington Redskins, 35-7, before 33,707 fans in Philadelphia. Greasy Neale's power boys treated Sammy Baugh to a rough time in the fourth quarter, converting three of Slingin' Sam's pass attempts into touchdowns.

The New York Yanks are firmly entrenched in first place in the National Conference of the National Football League and George did it, outshining his former teammate in the Yanks' 38-27 victory Sunday over the big, bad Chicago Bears.

Ratterman, who quarterbacked for the Yanks, passed for two touchdowns, set up two others and scored the fifth himself on a sneak through center. George completed 10 of 19 aerials for 276 yards and his master manipulations allowed Red Strader's Raiders to come off a 13-0 deficit built up by the Bruins early in the first quarter.

Lujack, who was rushed all day by hungry Yank ends, completed 20 of 39 passes, but four were intercepted and two led to New York scores. Sid Luckman also hit for two completions and together they accounted for 364 yards through the airlanes.

The Browns amazed 40,714 Cleveland viewers by all but abandoning their famous air attack to whack the Pittsburgh Steelers, 45-7, on the ground. They piled up 338 yards with Marion Motley heading the parade with 188 yards in eleven attempts. Motley scored two touchdowns.

The Browns tried only ten passes, and completed six for 195 yards.

A six-touchdown surge in the third period carried the offense-minded Rams to a 65-24 mowing down of the Detroit Lions before 25,775 in Los Angeles.

The Baltimore Colts were handed their sixth straight loss of the season when they bowed, 17-14, to the 49ers in San Francisco. A crowd of 15,091 saw a field goal by Gordon Soltau, from a difficult angle on the three-yard line, decide the issue that kept the Colts in the National conference cellar.

IT WAS THE sixth win for the Yanks, most in the league. They have lost only once. And it was

Few .30 Calibre Riflemen Shoot

Only about 25 persons participated in the Pickaway County Rifle and Pistol Club .30 calibre rifle shoot Sunday at Chillicothe range.

Local riflemen reported a mix-up in schedules for obtaining the heavy bore range was partly responsible for the meager turnout.

The club still has an excess of .30 calibre loads and probably will sponsor another shoot if weather conditions are right.

A few Pickaway Countians turned up at the range with their own deer guns to sight in at the 200-yard range. Ammunition was furnished by the Circleville club.

Vigorous Get-Out-The-Vote Campaign Launched In County

Spokesman Cites
Need For Balloting

Circleville Junior Chamber of Commerce Monday launched an all-out "Get out the Vote Campaign" designed to reach every eligible voter in Pickaway County with an appeal to vote in the election on Tuesday, November 7.

Henry Reid, chairman of the Jaycee "Get Out the Vote Campaign," cited that "voting in a free election is a priceless American heritage and there would be a revolution if it were even threatened." He added:

Yet, in 1948, almost half of the eligible voters in America voluntarily threw this priceless freedom away by not appearing at the polls."

He stated that in Ohio alone there were a million and a half people who could have voted and didn't. This number could swing any election. He showed that 8,750 persons, or 46 percent of the eligible voters in Pickaway County, did not even vote for President in 1948. He asked:

"Under these conditions how can you expect to get any definite statement of opinion at the polls?" Then he added:

"In international affairs we lead the world in spreading Democracy. We are advocating Democracy in Germany, and in their first election 40 percent more Germans voted than did Americans in the 1948 presidential election."

"IN THE EARLY days of this Republic, 80 percent or more of the voters went to the polls. Yet today in these trying times when issues can mean life or death to our country and freedom, our percentage of votes is dropping off."

"This astounding apathy has become a grave concern to leaders of both political parties. Why won't Americans vote?"

"At the ballot box are decided the issues which pattern the lives of every man, woman, and child of this nation. Here are chosen the national, state, and local leaders to make and administer our laws. Yet, elections are often being decided by those who stay away from the polls rather than by those who actually mark their ballots."

"This can change our free government to government of PART of the people by PART of the people and for PART of the people."

"Reid said that posters urging that everyone vote are being distributed by Jaycees to local merchants for display in their store windows.

Leaflets will be dropped from airplanes citing the importance of voting. Newspaper ads will be run. Voting slogans will be painted on downtown sidewalks. Industries will be contacted urg-

Open Letter to a Closed Mind
Marshal Tito
Government Palace
Belgrade, Yugoslavia

Dear Sir:

The other day, according to a dispatch from Belgrade, you abolished all special privileges enjoyed by Communist officials as regards food, housing and services. For the first time in history, your spokesman was quoted as saying, the rulers and the people were going to be treated exactly alike.

This piece of news, Your Excellency, hit me where I speculate, and so I moseyed down to the Public Library this morning to see whether you really rate the No. I spot on the all-time Split Parade.

And the answer, as I researched it, is that (a) you're a dozen centuries late, and (b) if history means anything, you're a cinch to fall flat on your postulate. Here are the pertinent precedents:

Back in the 8th Century, the ruler of Tibet, a sharp-conscienced gent named Muni Tsan-po, decreed that the wealth of his country be divvied up among the people, share-and-share-alike. A few years later, however, when Muni (no relation to Paul) took a turn around his baliwick to see how the plan was working, he found that in almost every case the rich had regained their riches and the poor their poverty.

Twice more he reshuffled the wealth, but when the results were the same he finally abandoned the notion and decided to devote the rest of his life to

ing them to give every employee a chance to vote. Organizations will also be contacted. All this is included in the Jaycee campaign, Reid said.

SERVING ON the committee with Reid are Donald Crist, Paul Campbell, Richard Plum, R. L. Bremer Jr. and Tom Harden.

"The Jaycees," Reid stated, "feel that if all the citizenry exercise its right to vote this year, the issues and candidates will be selected intelligently. We feel it is not only the right, but also the responsibility of every eligible voter to go to the polls and vote on Nov. 7 according to his convictions."

CLEVELAND, Oct. 30—Cleveland's first color television broadcast will take place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday mornings when the International College of Surgeons presents colorcasts of surgical procedures from St. Vincent hospital.

The colorcasts, however, will not be seen on any home television sets. They will be presented on sets in the public auditorium, where the group opens its lobbying activities of business.

The program will open Wednesday morning with the televised demonstration of surgical repair of a rupture of the diaphragm between a patient's chest and stomach.

soon after the Stakhanovite piecework system was introduced in 1935.

YES, COCKEYED as it may seem, only 15 years after the revolution there was a greater gap between top and bottom wage levels in Communist Russia than there had ever been in Capitalist America.

Am setting forth all these grim statistics to prove the over-worked cliché that you can't change human nature? Not at all—I've seen human nature overhauled more than once in the last century. However, if you'll pardon the presumption, I am trying to point out to Your Excellency that no matter how you juggle human nature you can't eliminate it entirely.

Sincerely,
Billy Rose

Politics Enter Probe Of Lobby Work In Capital

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—A clear definition of lobbying apparently depends on which party you belong to.

A week ago the House Lobby Investigation Committee handed down a report, signed only by the Democrat members, which was generally critical of the lobbying activities of business.

Now the three Republicans on the committee, who refused to sign the report, have a statement of their own. They charge that the majority report ignored lobbying by labor groups and government organizations.

The GOP members, Reps. Hallock, Ind., Brown, Ohio, and O'Hara, Minn., said the majority report is "as lopsided as the leaning tower of Pisa, as intolerant as an article in Pravda, and as questionable as the testimony of Alger Hiss."

In addition, the Republicans declared that the document "clearly is designed to help the leftists who are running for office on administration tickets."

Democratic members who signed the report are Chairman Buchanan, Pa., Lanham, Ga., and Doyle, Calif.

Wholesale Price Level Going Up

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—The Bureau of Labor Statistics report that average wholesale prices advanced one tenth of one percent in the week ended Oct. 17.

The price index moved up to 168.9 percent of the 1926 average, of three tenths of one percent below a month ago. It also is 10.8 higher than the comparable week in 1949.

ALLEN EAGLESON

To the Voters of Pickaway County:

Upon learning too late to enter primaries that the present Republican County Auditor was unopposed for reelection, I filed an INDEPENDENT PETITION and have been given the unanimous endorsement of the County Democratic Executive Committee as I have voted regularly at the Democratic Primaries and consider myself a Democrat. However, there will be no party label under my name on the ballot (as shown above), according to a decision of the Secretary of State for Ohio.

As it has been impossible for me to become acquainted with each of you personally, following are a few facts about myself.

I am 39 years of age, having been a resident of Pickaway County for the last 32 of them. I am also a graduate of Ohio State University. Having had to quit my recent Civil Service job because of taking an active part in politics, I am at present temporarily employed at a north end filling-station in Circleville.

Considering myself both qualified and able to perform the duties of the Office of Auditor of Pickaway County, I remain,

Respectfully yours,
